Mussolini Adheres To His Maxim: "Keep the Government Young"

By Cecil Brown
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

ROME, Oct. 31.—In a shakeup of earthquake proportions, seven cabinet ministers today resigned or were changed, command of the army changed, and a new secretary of the Fascist group took control.

The most important move saw Marshal Graziani, hero of the Ethiopian conquest, installed as chief of the staff of the army, in place of General Pariani.

Achille Starace, secretary-general of the Fascist party since 1932, resigned, and was made head of the Fascist militia. General Ettore Muti, formerly in charge of Fascist activities abroad, supplanted Starace in the general secretaryship.

Wholesale replacement of these men came as evidence that Premier Mussolini is adhering to his maxim: "Keep the government young," by which he keeps a constant supply of new leaders coming along.

Some of the changes, it was explained, are designed to inject new initiative and strength into the government.

WARNS OFFICERS AGAINST MENTAL "DEFECTIVES"

Major Thomas Martin, Penna.
Police Training School,
Gives Interesting Talk

IS RECIPIENT OF A GIFT

DOYLESTOWN, Oct. 31.—"Murders, robbers and most professionals are cowards and will surrender when caught," said Major Thomas Martin, who told the Bucks county policemen and constables never to trust an insane person. "A policeman cannot diagnose what an insane man will do so don't be misled. Never treat an insane person as a hardened criminal except when your life is endangered."

Major Martin, of the Pennsylvania Motor Police Training School, of Hershey, addressed a meeting of the Bucks County Police Academy, held here.

"Out of 16 police officers slain eight of them were killed by mental defects, including 'drunks' and insane people."

Major Martin, who was made an honorary member of the Bucks County Crime Laboratory, was presented a handsome combination comb, cigarette and lighter case in appreciation of his services and kindness to the Bucks county law enforcement officers.

Major Martin told the men to be calm and soothing in their approach, but persuasive and slow. He explained the use of cuffs, twine, wire and a handkerchief in securing a person and warned the officers about making a search by themselves. "Procure help and don't go alone. A policeman can command the assistance of a citizen who may be compelled to assist the officer by law."

In the apprehension of insane persons, Major Martin warned the officers about being careful to procure the proper information and be positive who is responsible. He advised them to procure a warrant in case of violence and possible court procedure.

Major Martin told them how to use effectively a mattress to crowd the person, a chair to tilt at him like a lion tamer does, tear-gas or a liquid disabler.

He also pointed out how the hood of an automobile may be used that 20 pounds of newspapers will not be penetrated by a bullet and how a truck filled with straw may be backed up to the building and used in apprehending insane persons.

No Discord Here!

(By "The Stroller")
The fact that the family of Harry Wilkinson, Sr., Newport Road, owns a perky black and white dog, two cats and several chickens is nothing unusual, but the fact that eight of this mixed group have been caught eating from one bowl of food at a time is rather remarkable.
The dog, two cats, and five of the hens gathered about the "festive board." And instead of discord as one would suppose, there was nothing but harmony, none minding the presence of the others.

Hold Nazis Responsible For Crew

Berlin, Oct. 31.—The United States is holding the Nazis responsible for the safety of Captain Joseph A. Gairard and his American crew of 41 aboard the captured freighter City of Flint, it was learned in Berlin today.

Alexander C. Kirk, United States charge d'affaires here, has received instructions from Washington to call the dispatch to the attention of the German government.

A spokesman for the American Embassy unofficially disclosed this latest action taken by Washington to assure the safety of the Americans aboard the steamer as unwilling guests during its perilous journey from Tromsø, Norway to some German Baltic port.

Acting on the instructions from Washington, Kirk communicated with the United States consulate at Hamburg.

Officials there were told to follow each movement of the City of Flint with utmost care and to send to Washington a clear verdict when the case comes before the Hamburg prize court—assuming that it safely arrives in Germany.

German authorities continue to maintain silence regarding the vessel's program since she left Tromsø, after Norwegian authorities refused to comply with the prize crew's request. Should the City of Flint run the British blockade she is expected to reach port by Thursday.

APPEAL IS FILED IN ZONING ORDINANCE CASE

Steps Taken To Have Court
Give Ruling On Perkasio
Ordinance

QUERY INTERPRETATION

PERKASIE, Oct. 31.—An appeal was recently filed in the Court of Common Pleas seeking an opinion on the validity of the Zoning Ordinance, as well as the interpretation of the ordinance. The appeal was filed by Donald Smith, attorney for Marcus W. Gilbert.

This action is an outgrowth of a decision of the Board of Adjustment in which a permit to construct a garage on the Gilbert property at Fourth and Vine street, was refused.

The appellant avers that the decision of the Board of Adjustment is illegal and charges that it constitutes an "unlawful deprivation of the rights of the petitioner to the enjoyment and use of his property." It is further averred that "the Ordinance is unconstitutional in that it is arbitrary, capricious and deprives the petitioner of the lawful use of his property without due process of law."

Borough officials, real estate dealers and property owners in general are frank in voicing their approval of the legal action, not that there is any particular interest in the case involved, but a judicial opinion will definitely determine whether or not Zoning Ordinances are a practical, workable step in the development of a community.

The case at issue here concerned the erection of a proposed garage in a Class "A" residential district. The application for a building permit was made to the Building Inspector, Frank O'Rourke. In the opinion of O'Rourke the plans for the proposed garage did not meet the requirements of the Zoning Ordinance and he turned the application over to the Board of Adjustment for an opinion. The Board refused to issue a permit, but agreed to submit the question to a public hearing, as provided by the ordinance. The hearing was arranged and advertised, urging all at interest and especially residents and property owners in the vicinity of the site at issue, to attend. The hearing was held and as a result of the opinion expressed at the hearing the Board of Adjusters continued in their refusal to issue a permit.

The appeal will be argued before the court possibly in January.

INCREASED NEED FOR

Wide Expansion of National Defense System Given
As One Reason

DRIVE OPENS NOV. 11TH

"Wide expansion of the national defense system, calling for an increase of 40 per cent in the personnel of the armed forces, necessitates increased Red Cross service to members of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps during the next year," Blackwell Newhall, Chairman of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter of the American Red Cross, said today in an appeal for increased membership.

"The Red Cross," he said, "has set as a goal a million more members for this year's Roll Call, scheduled to be held between November 11th and 30th." He pointed out that the Red Cross must be prepared to meet greater demands for the augmented military personnel.

"As a strictly neutral organization, established as such under the Treaty of Geneva, the Red Cross shares with the people of this community strongest hopes for peace," Newhall said. "But in view of the very purpose for which it was established, the Red Cross must be prepared for any emergency."

Red Cross War Service has a peacetime as well as a war-time function. The organization carries on a daily program throughout the country assisting veterans and those in the regular armed services.

"In military stations and hospitals throughout the country, the Red Cross during the past year assisted more than 50,000 soldiers, sailors, marines and coast guardsmen. Thousands of service men in this country as well as those stationed in our insular and foreign possessions were given assistance last year in an effort to solve problems arising from illness and other causes.

"Red Cross aid to disabled veterans has been one of the largest programs of the Red Cross since the World War. Despite the fact that the conflict ended 21 years ago, the individual cases of 150,000 veterans of all wars came under the care of the Red Cross during the past year. In regional offices of the Veterans administration and Government hospitals, representatives of the Red Cross dealt with an additional 54,792 ex-service men or their families."

Newhall explained that the Congressional Charter of the Red Cross officially designates the organization to carry on a program of the relief

Mr. Wallace Not "In Bad"

Washington, Oct. 28.
THE inspired comment of the President's secretary, Mr. Stephen Early, upon the recent utterance of Mr. Henry Wallace, insisting that the war makes a third term for Mr. Roosevelt inevitable, was—like a good many other of Mr. Early's inspired comments—coy, uncertain and ambiguous.
—O—
THIS is not at all Mr. Early's fault. Personally, Mr. Early is a forthright, able, amiable man who dislikes to speak in a mealy-mouthed way. The fault lies with his job, which prevents him from speaking for himself, and with the man he represents, who in this

Drive On To Ratify Contracts

Washington, Oct. 31.—The administration's challenge, to W. H. Vanderbilt, Rhode Island's Republican governor, to test the legality of the reciprocal trade agreement program in the court, developed a new drive in Congress today for Congressional ratification of such contracts.

Under present law, the agreements are negotiated by the State Department.

Decision of western senators to demand the right of Congressional ratification of such contracts before they can become effective brought to a head the opposition to the proposed agreement with Argentina.

Vanderbilt, contending the trade agreement with France is injuring the Rhode Island lace industry, urged that the question be settled by the Supreme Court. If the State Department is so sure that the program is legal, the Governor wrote, it should not fear any court decision.

DESTROYING FREE ENTERPRISE

The current lending-spending program of the Washington administration "has neither substantially reduced unemployment nor laid the foundation for sound economic recovery," according to Fitzgerald Hall, of Nashville, Tenn., president of the Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis Railroad, in a recent address before a group of hardware dealers at Atlantic City.

Mr. Hall said that according to an economist of note the United States government as of April 1939, was employing 5,391,437 persons, a 550 per cent increase over 1930. State and local governments were employing approximately 3,000,000 in addition. These 8.5 million job holders cost the tax-paying public about $9,000,000,000 a year.

To put it another way, said the speaker, the office-holding class in the United States costs the average family about 20 per cent of its total income.

Furthermore, Mr. Hall said, the United States now owns in acreage about one-fifth of all the land in the country, taking that much out of the tax base.

As a matter of fact, he continued, the public debt has been growing while the tax base has continually been narrowed.

For the 10-year period, 1926 to 1935, inclusive, all active corporations in this country paid $9,000,000 or 45 per cent, more in taxes than the amount available for dividends and surplus.

For the 5 years from 1925 to 1929, inclusive, railroad earnings after operating expenses, the tax collectors took 28 per cent; for the five years, 1930 to 1934, inclusive, they took 42 per cent, and for the 5 years from 1935 through 1939, they took (or will take) 46 per cent.

From this Mr. Hall deduced the obvious fact that the less the railroads earned the more, relatively, they pay in taxes.

While governmental deficits were increasing some $30,000,000,000, the government spent some $20,000,000,000 on property which cannot be directly taxed, thus making it more difficult to pay our public debt. At the same time these vast public expenditures did little to solve our unemployment problem.

Affairs in Europe should not be allowed to take our minds off this deadly menace for a single moment.

Tobacco Road To Show Here Twice Thursday

"Tobacco Road," the record-breaking Broadway success, has been booked for the Grand Theater, Thursday, Nov. 2nd, with a matinee. This will be the first touring dramatic attraction to play Bristol this season and its presentation here brings to theatregoers the famous Jack Kirkland play of poor whites of the south which has run longer in New York than any other play ever produced.

Based on Erskine Caldwell's widely read novel of Georgia share-croppers "Tobacco Road" has stirred more discussion than any other drama of recent years. Its production stimulated Congress to make a special investigation into the condition of these tenant farmers of the south while the Julius Rosewald Fund set aside a sum of money for the same purpose. Called by the literary celebrities "the epic American play" it depicts a cross-section of life among people who have been neglected by the government and by civilization for many years.

NO "YANKEE INGENUITY"

WORCESTER, Mass. (INS)—"Is Yankee ingenuity on the wane?" Worcester Polytechnic Institute officials are asking this question as the result of an announcement that the "Yankee Ingenuity" prize of $500 would not be awarded this year. Because of an insufficient display of native initiative, the institute did not award the prize, given annually to a New England native student inventing some "project displaying ingenuity of a high order."

"LOVE'S INTERLUDE" by -MAY- CHRISTIE

SYNOPSIS

Maira Carewe met handsome, devil-may-care Tarleton Griggs during the era of prohibition, jazz and the "Black Bottom." The son of a rich man, Tarry lived recklessly—only for today. It was that spirit which Maira loved. During her Christmas vacation from boarding school, Maira has a merry time with Tarry but their last night together is blighted by the news that Tarry is leaving for Palm Beach at his father's suggestion. Lady Careen Kilmory is there, and it is common gossip that the self-made, socially ambitious Joseph Griggs would welcome a match between her and his son. That summer, Tarry toured Europe with his father. Maira was desolate. The society columns told her plenty. There she saw many pictures of Tarry and Lady Careen. Maira did not see Tarry again until Christmas and then just once, for skating. A year later, Griggs, Sr., gives a party to celebrate Tarry's coming of age. Maira is invited and Tarry showers her with attention, ignoring Lady Careen. It is a shock, therefore, when at supper Mr. Griggs announces his son's engagement to Lady Careen. The wedding is set for Christmas Day. At a meeting of the hounds, the day before his marriage, Tarry comes upon Maira, resting. He takes her in his arms and tells her it is she he loves, and that he is marrying Lady Careen because his father wishes it. Lady Careen intrudes upon the tender scene. Disillusioned, she gallops off and plunges over "Devil's Leap," breaking her neck. Although her death is listed as "accidental," there is much gossip. Maira and Tarry are conscience stricken and he goes abroad to forget.

CHAPTER VI

When Maira insisted on going to Paris with her Boston friends and in charges, there were no arguments now. With the ocean between her and the scene of the accident, and occupied with her little pupils and her studies at the Sorbonne, she would forget, thought Aunt Melinda and her father.

Weeks went by. She worked hard. Every moment of the day was occupied. Time was a healer. And—there were letters from Tarry now. He was in England.

If there were no actual words of love written, she read between the lines. Naturally it was no time to speak of love, with the tragedy that had touched that love so recent.

Spring came. He came to Paris too, to meet his father. He and his father were at the Crillon hotel. The great sweep of the Place de la Concorde under its windows blazed with tulips.

Tarry and Maira dined at Armentouville, in the Bois, the first night they met. Dined under the centuries-old trees that were festooned with lamps shaded like roses. Above that, the stars.

"I've missed you terribly, Maira!" He looked older. More serious. "It's wonderful having you here, Tarry! How long will you be staying?" She drew a deep breath.

"Depends on the old man. He's crochety. I may have to go to Baden-Baden with him. His liver, you know."

He did not ask her of her own plans.

They danced on the open-air platform. It reminded her of that other time she had danced with him on such a platform—at Tourney Park at his coming-of-age, directly before his engagement had been announced by his father. It had been a thunder-bolt to her that night!

Always, it seemed, when she was happiest with Tarry, disaster followed. Don't think of that.

Live in the moment. That was his credo.

"I'm booked to go out to the races at Autheil tomorrow with the old man. We've a dinner and theatre-party afterwards, with some friends from Philadelphia."

"Women?"

"Um. The Vandergelts. Mama and daughter. They're at the Ritz."

"Is she pretty, Tarry?" Idiotic question! Laugh it off!

"Not as pretty as you. But lively as a tickle. Her mother says they are going on to Baden-Baden. I think it's what gave my old man his idea."

"Will you be free the day after tomorrow, Tarry?" It was her birthday.

"Do my best. Any special reason why?"

She told him.

"We'll celebrate! I'll pick you up at twelve-thirty."

He brought orchids for her. They glorified her plain little suit. Then to the most fashionable spot in Paris at that time, the famous Ladies' Bar in the Ritz Hotel. The small room was packed. They had champagne cocktails, lunched in the garden. Then to the races at Longchamps. Tarry placed bets for her. She won eight hundred francs.

"There's the old man with the Vandergelts," he later told her, an odd expression in his eyes. She followed him.

Madrid. Tarry and his father were going somewhere, later, with the Vandergelts.

He came next morning, to the simple apartment where Maira earned room and board. Not Tarry, but his father! His ultimatum brief and to the point.

"This boy-and-girl affair has got to end! I've other views for Tarleton's future, and I've told him that if he goes against my wishes and marries you, I'll cut him off without a nickel! Now I don't want to hear any romantic poppycock about love in a cottage, and that sort of stuff! Tarleton has been brought up expensively, and he'd be miserable without money. If you care for him, you'll let him go, my good girl!"

She said nothing.

"If you care for him, for his own sake you'll let him go, my good girl!" said Mr. Griggs.

THE REPUBLICAN CANDIDATES

JUDGE OF SUPREME COURT Hon. Marion D. Patterson	CLERK OF ORPHANS' COURT Adelaide Ross
JUDGE OF SUPERIOR COURT Hon. William E. Hirt Hon. Thomas J. Baldrige Hon. William H. Keller	CLERK OF QUARTER SESSIONS Paul R. Nichols
JUDGE OF COMMON PLEAS Hon. Hiram H. Keller	COUNTY COMMISSIONER Joseph D. Baker William O. Hunsicker

1. The names of the above sixteen Republican candidates appeared on the Republican Primary Ballot at the Primary Election held on September 12th, and approximately 9500 Republican voters went to the Primary Election and nominated them. Some had opposition, others did not.

2. Every one of the Republican candidates is well and favorably known in the community in which he or she lives for their honesty, ability and possessing the qualifications for the offices they seek.

3. For some years the public affairs and business of Bucks County have been under Republican administration and the reason the Republican Party has been kept in power in Bucks County, is that it has given the County an honest, capable and efficient administration of county affairs.

4. Bucks County still maintains as low a tax rate as any County in its class in Pennsylvania, in spite of increased expenses, and compared with neighboring Counties, it is low in its per capita debt.

The per capita debt of Pennsylvania as a whole is $67.79 for each person. In Philadelphia County it is $61.13 for each person; in Montgomery County it is $48.77; in Lehigh County it is $40.12; IN BUCKS COUNTY IT IS $36.16.

5. Contrary to many other counties in Pennsylvania, the Republican county officials take charge of and work with their deputies and clerks, and perform their share of the duties of the office, six days a week. You will find no "drones" in the Court House or at the Administration Building.

6. It is a matter of history that when the Democratic Party secures control of National or State government, its officials are very free in spending the public money.

When the Democratic Party secured control of the National Government in 1932, the public debt in round figures was $19,000,000,000. Within six years the Democratic Party has increased the public debt to approximately $30,000,000,000!

When the Earle Administration took office in January, 1935, there were 8825 employees in the various State Departments. At the end of the Earle Administration there were 12,436 employees, an increase of 3611.

Expenditures during the second biennium of the Democratic regime (1937-39) were 181 millions more than the bi

GRAND THEATRE

Director Archie Mayo calls it "mud pies."

Andrea Leeds calls it "art." But on the stage of Samuel Goldwyn's production "They Shall Have Music," now playing at the Grand Theatre, the industrious young lady introduced a new wrinkle in between-the-scenes occupations—pottery.

"They Shall Have Music," which stars Jascha Heifetz, is a United Artists release.

RITZ THEATRE

Rochelle Hudson's lovely smile caused her to be dismissed from the set during production of Republic's "Pride of the Navy," which comes today to the Ritz Theatre.

Director Charles Lamont was working on a close-up scene of James Dunn as he drives a splinted torpedo boat—a small, swift speed boat which launches torpedoes. Dunn is supposed to be driving at a furious pace and to set the effect of waves splashing over the side of the boat, prop men aimed three hoses of water at Jimmy from three directions.

BRISTOL THEATRE

Bing Crosby, the nation's bellwether

in the purveyance of song, certainly rang the song—or hit any other high mark which might be chosen to designate great entertainment—when Paramount's new comedy drama with music, "The Star Maker," opened the other night at the Bristol Theatre.

Cast as a dreamy, penitless song writer, a young fellow who writes songs which do not sell, but who eventually rides to success by presenting great kiddie acts, Bing is at his pristine best. And he is ably supported by a grand cast including Louise Campbell, Linda Ware, sensational fourteen-year-old singing discovery, Ned Sparks, and Walter Damrosch, conducting The Philharmonic Orchestra of Los Angeles.

SEASON FOR SMALL GAME WILL OPEN IN STATE TOMORROW

More Than Half-Million Hunters Expected In the Field

SMALL GAME PLENTIFUL

Rabbits More Plentiful Than In The Past Five Years

The small game season opens tomorrow with prospects exceedingly bright for plenty of game. More than a half million hunters are expected to take to the field in quest of the elusive cottontail rabbit, the whirling pheasant, and the quail.

According to reports from the Game Commission small game is plentiful and it was also announced that improved industrial conditions in this state will quite likely reduce the number of hunters as well as curtail the time spent in the fields of the state, by those who do purchase a hunter's license.

Rabbits apparently are more plentiful than in the past five years and squirrels too, are quite plentiful which will compensate for the shortage in ringnecks.

Nine o'clock a. m. has been designated as the time to begin hunting on opening day, November 1st. Thereafter the hour to begin is fixed at seven o'clock a. m. Hunting is permitted until five p. m.

Daily and season bag limits for small game: Rabbits, cottontail, 4 and 20; quail, 5 and 15; ringnecked pheasants, male only, 2 and 12; ruffed grouse, 2 and 10; squirrels, combined kinds, 6 and 20.

There is no open season for Reeves pheasants, Chukar partridge, Doves, Snowshoe rabbits, Elk and cub bear.

No Hungarian quail may be shot in Bucks county.

Raccoons may be hunted at night until December 31. The kill is limited to 3 daily and 12 for the season. In a number of counties in Pennsylvania raccoons may be trapped but this does not apply to Bucks County. In this county trapping raccoons is forbidden.

The open season for rabbits, squirrels and ringnecked pheasants runs throughout the month of November, Sundays excepted. The season for quail and ruffed grouse closes November 21.

Hunters must have a hunter's license, except landowners or tenants who actually reside upon and cultivate the lands. Such landowners and tenants may hunt without a license upon the land where they reside and upon immediately adjoining land. They must, however, have the consent or permission of the owners of such adjoining lands.

Much of the land in this community is posted. An Act of the Legislature provides a penalty of $10 for trespassing upon land which is legally posted. Hunters are urged to seek permission of land-owners before entering upon property.

Help Curb Vandalism!

Pennsylvania Game Commission

Hunters who shoot at livestock, tear down fences, leave gates open, or commit other acts of vandalism against the landowner, he in self-defense posts his land against all hunting to protect his property. Persons caught engaged in such nefarious practices are subject to heavy penalties and revocation of their hunting licenses. Be a sportsman, respect the rights of the landowner, thus guaranteeing his friendship and shooting privileges on his land.

MADISON BOWLING TEAM IS LEADING THE LEAGUE

With the first round over, the Madison bowling team is leading the Federal League with a total of 22 wins and 6 defeats. Three games behind the league-leaders comes the Badenhausen team while limping in third place are Joe Barton's gasoline boys.
